The backbone of President Garfield will be thoroughly tested when it comes to decide on the removal of Attorney General MacVeagh.

Jeff Davis fell flat as a Confederate leader, and his history of the Confederacy has fallen flat on the market. Confederate literature like Confederate script is below par.

It is claimed that the national debt is owned by less than 100,000 persons. The largest owner of government bonds is William H. Vanderbilt, who now owns about sixty millions.

A great many colleges make a pretty free use of the degree LL.D., but when the Beloit College conferred it upon Associate Justice Cassoday, it honored a man who will honor the title.

The faction in New York which refuses to compromise the present difficulty will be indicted at the bar of public opinion for attempting to strangle the Republican party in that State.

Up to last Saturday, the administration had refunded $558,000,000 of the national debt into 31/2 per cent bonds. The saving of interest by this wise refunding scheme is from $10,000,000 to $12,000,000 a year.

The bulls began to cry early in the spring that there would be no crops this year on account of the "extreme lateness" of the spring. There will be considerable interest atwho has been indicted for bribery by the grand jury at Albany. He has given $3,000 bail and will appear from time to time in Court until the trial takes place, and just when that will be there is no telling. It is charged by the administration men that he was quickly indicted for political effect, and then the trial delayed. The evidence against Sessions is by no means positive. The strongest point against him is his past record as a lobbyist and a political speculator. No one will deny that he is too good a man to attempt bribery, but on the other hand there is no proof against him, and the testimony of Bradley is no better than the statements of Sessions.

The readers of the Gazette have not forgotten the Rev. John Jasper, of Richmond, Virginia, who become fa mous a few years ago by his sermon ar guing that the sun and not the earth, moves. His sermon was largely quoted and created a great deal of interest and very much merriment. The old mar has now reached the end of his life, and is dying at his home in Richmond. In many respects he was a man of remarkable ability. He preached to the largest congregation of any man in the South, and one of largest in the United States. Every Sunday it numbered not less than four thousand, and hundreds were weekly turned away unable to obtain admission. His celebrated sermon on the rotation of of the sun was repeated a hundred times, and was strangely interesting, if not able.

There has been a surprisingly large growth in the strength of railway companies in the United States during the past half dozen years. The increase in the number of miles put in operation and the vast increase in the business is one of the great wonders of the time. Conspicuous among the powerful and enterprising railway corporations of the country, stands the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul, whose extensions during the past two or three years can not but strike one with amazement. This may be called a Wisconsin company, because the general officers reside in Milwaukee and the headquarters of the company are also located in that city. It now operates and controls more miles of road than any other railroad corporation in the world! This may sound like exaggeration but it is nevertheless true. It has now under its immediate management 3,627 miles, and still the company keeps on extending its lines into the new States and Territories and making settlements, building villages, and opening trade wherever its lines are extended. There was a time when this company, as well as nearly all others. was struggling hard to make extensions and earn enough to pay for running party.

tience waiting for the Republican party but these struggles are things of the past, and now the company is strong and healthy, and the stock which only a very few years ago sold for 60 or 70 cents on the dollar, is worth $1.25. This is proud achievement for the Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul.

THE LATE J. ALLEN BARBER.

The Gazette has already mentioned the death of Hon. J. Allen Barber, who died at his home in Lancaster, on Tuesday, the 28th. But there are some points of character of the man which should be noted. He was prominent at the bar of the State, had filled and an important position in the political history of the State, and had accumulated a large fortune. He settled in Lancaster nearly forty-four years ago, and in that small, unpretentious inland town, which rarely ever saw a business boom, he practiced law dealt in real estate, and before he died had accumulated a fortune estimated at a quarter of a million. His constant industry and severe economy, which he never relinquished till the last days of his life, made him one of the solidest men, financially, in Grant county. Mr. Barber was never a popular man, and why he was not is told by Mr. Rublee, of the Milwaukee Republican and News:

"He lacked what the politicians call magnetism, and the arts and characterissics which go to make up what is termed the whole-souled fellow. In the Legislature he was detested as a rule by the lobby. He never was absent from his he knew the contents of every bill as soon as the title was read and was always on the tions are apt to disapprove of them, and to characterize them as cold-blooded, A young lady, of Wheeling, West Vir- selfish and unpopular. During his two had, however, considerably passed the middle age of life, and probably did not feel the spur of ambition excite him as it would have done at an earlier period of his career had a similar opportunity been presented him."

MACVEAGH SHOULD REMAIN. For more than three months there have been reckless rumors that there would be a break in the cabinet of President Garfield. It was first one cabinet officer, then another to be retired, and at lied upon, and the people should wait last reports say that Attorney General MacVeagh will certainly be asked to resign. Things have come to that pitch that all the present mombers of the cabinet can not serve under the one admintached to the trial of Senator Sessions, istration. The elements are too conflict ing and the factions too bitter to allow such men as MacVeagh and Blaine hold peaceful relations the same cabinet. Mr. MacVeagh represents the independent element in the Republican party. He believes as strongly in Republican principles as Mr. Blaine, but has never been considered a thorough party man. Because he was an able lawyer and an excellent representative of the independent wing of the party, he was appointed Attorney General, and on these grounds the appointment was applauded by all the factions of the party who were fair enough to believe that each element should be recognized by the ad-

But so far the experience of President Garfield in trying to harmonize and recognize all the elements in the party, has not been pleasant nor successful. Mac Veagh went into the cabinet under difficulties. Although he married Don Cameron's sister, and thereby be came a member of the Cameron family, that did not save him from receiving the opposition of both father-in-law and brother-in law, and only to save his sister from being snubbed, did Don Cameron move the confirmation of MacVeagh. From the very start Mr. Blaine had a deep seated bitterness toward the Attorney General, and it only took a few weeks to demonstrate that so long these two men were cabinet there never would be happiness in the political family of President Gar-

Whatever may be the opinion of Secretary Blaine in regard to the prosecution of the star route thieves, it will never do for him to oppose MacVeagh because the latter is pursuing the robbers with fearless courage and matchless vigor. Under no circumstances should these prosecutions be stopped, and to oust the Attorney General because he is bent on punishing government swindlers, would be a deadly reflection on the administration and a mortal blow to the Republican

NO CHANGE.

ALBANY, June 29 .- On the single bal lot which was taken to-day, but six mem bers changed their candidates, and the changes were unimportant. The administration men and bucks were too thoroughly committed to certain lines of policy which they feel unwliling to abandon of their own accord. So it has de volved on the the Feather-heads or Half-Bucks to inaugurate a movement look ing to a break in the dead-lock. A can cus seems to be the only way to end the struggle, and the talk on this question is stendily inorcasing. It 18 mored that the Featherheads have a peti tion for a caucus in circulation for signatures. The document binds the signers to support the candidates who may be nominated at the meeting, and pledges them to an open ballot, thus doing away with the principal objection of the ad ministrationists. The subject has been brought up at the last two administration conferences, and, although the sentiment has been overwhelmingly against such a move, the proposition has found several warm supporters. Assemblyman a Wheeler-Depew The Tribune Steele, correspondent this evening that he would not be surprised to find that seventy members would go in for a caucus, if the scheme was judiciously worked up. There is one strong objection which is urged against a caucus. No candidate has a majority of the Republican votes now, and it appears doubtful if there would be any change of sentiment when the members go into a caucus, unless new names are brought forward, so that the caucus would be simply a repetition of the vote of the joint convention. Still, it is probable that a compromise might

ROBERTSON.

Washington, June 29.—It is possible that a new element will be brought into the Senatorial contest in New York, by the fact that the President to-day signed the commission of Senator Robertson to be collector. It is expected that Robertson will take the oath and enter upon his duties July 1, which might deprive the administrationists of their leader.

New York, June 29 .- A medium-sized man, wearing a broad-brimmed Panama hat and a loosely cut frock coat of blue cloth, falling over voluminous gray trousers, stood upon the main deck of the steamship Bothnia as she swung alongside her wharf at exactly 8 o'clock this morning. He was accompanied by a party consisting of three ladies and a fine, stout, comfortable-looking old gen-

END OF THE STORY.

New York, June 28.—The romance of the stealing of Stewart's body, which has been continued for several days in a morning paper, is concluded. Nobody is any wiser for the story. The case remains, as before, shrowded in mystery. The negotiations were broken off, it seems, because the thieves were not permitted to return the body, receive the re-ward, and have "no questions asked." The question still is, "Where is the body?" "Unless," says the detective, "the immunity is guaranteed and no questions asked, the crypt of the magnificent cathedral at Garden City will never contain all that remains of the late A. T. Stewart."

He has made them his whole study, both cause and cure, and his system of treatment, as developed in his numerous letters, show that he has not studied in vain. THE COMET'S COURSE.

Washington, June 29.—The comet is estimated at the naval observatory to be now about 30,000,000 miles from the earth. Its nucles is 700 miles in diame er. and the envelone short the nucleus 200,000 miles in diameter. The tail is calculated to be 5,000,000 miles in length The fact that its orbit lies within the orbit of the earth explains the apparent paradox of its receding from the earth while approaching the sun. On the 20th of June last it came nearest the earth, being then but 10,000,000 miles away, and some astronomers here think it probable that the earth then passed through the tail of the comet.

A BIG TORNADO.

FORT WAYNE, June 20 .- One of the most curious results of the force of the gale of wind was experienced at 5 o'clock this morning on the Wabash, St. Louis and Pacific railroad, at a point five miles west of the city of Wabash. At the time the tornado was at its highest, a section of freight train No. 21, Richardson, conductor, was blowing along at its usual rate, when the engineer noticed his engine shoot suddenly ahead at a high rate of speed. Turning, he found to his utter astonishment that the entire train of twenty-nine cars, but three of which were loaded, had been blown from the track, and nineteen of them had been lifted clear off the trucks, and were at that moment engaged in arranging themselves in the ditch alongside the track. Nobody was hurt by the remarkable accident, and after a delay of three hours the train ran on again as usual.

A Baptist Minister's Experience.

I am a Baptist minister, and before even thought of being a clergyman, I graduated in medicine, but left a lucrative practice for my present profession, 40 years ago. I was for many years a sufferer from quinsy: "Thomas Eclec-TRIC OIL cured me." I was also troubled with hoarseness, and Thomas Eclectric Oil always relieved me. My wife and child had diphtheria, and "Thomas' Eclectric Oil cured them," and if taken in time it will cure seven times out of ten. I am confident it is a cure for the most obstinate cold or cough, and if any one will take a small teaspoon and half fill it with Oil, and then place the end of the spoon into the head by snuffing as hard as they can, until the Oil falls over into the throat, and practice that twice a week, I don't care how offensive their head may be, it will clean it out and cure the President will not be influenced by any of the opposition against the Attorney General. Breaking the Colt.

Many a fine horse is ruined before it becomes a horse at all, and the owner can charge his loss upon the mismanagement of the colt at time of breaking. We have seen colts, after remarkable patience with the stupidity or vicious-ness of those breaking them, at last resort to kicking or balking, through fear or in self-defense, and in many cases the defect is lasting.

A very great mistake is to permit the colt to run wild from the time it is foaled until it reaches the proper age for breaking. It is not uncommon to find colts that are as wild as hawks, because they have never been even fondled, much less familiarized with the touch of any part of harness. Very naturally such a colt is handled with difficulty and danger when the attempt to break it is made. Such a result is utterly inexcusable, for it is rather a pleasure than otherwise to familiarize the colt with being handled, and the accomplishing of that object should be be-gun at once, and the breaking of the colt, in the proper sense, should be commenced as soon as it is weaned. That is to say, it should be accustomed to the halter, to being led about, and even tied up for short periods. The sur-cingle can be applied; anything that can be done without injury to the colt to accustom it to the touch of harness should be done, gradually of course, for not only would nothing be gained by doing everything at once, but the irritation that would be caused might be injurious to the young animal. After the first year the breaking should be more in earnest. The colt can then be bitted, care being taken to select a much smaller bit than is generally used and one that will not hurt the animal's mouth. A wooden bit is a good thing to commence with. When he has become accustomed to the bit, which he will in a few days, it is advisable to fasten ropes to it, and extend them to a loose girth over the back, attaching loose girth over the back, attaching them thereto. Thus harnessed he may be driven as it were over a field, the trainer pulling the ropes occasionally. Portions of the harness can be very soon placed upon him, and by the time the colt is really old enough for use he will be pretty thoroughly "taught," if such a course is followed. In handling a colt, or for that matter a horse, we never want to forget our first duty is to gain the animal's confidence, and, in the next place, that the anican not do anything if it does not understand what is wanted of it. An incompetent trainer attempts to induce the animal to do a certain thing, and because it does not understand what is required of it and consequently can not do it, the trainer flies into a passion, the animal becomes excited, loses confidence both in itself and in the trainer, and great injury is done. No man is fit to handle a horse, much less a colt, who has not just as much patience as a competent teacher has with a child. He should proceed just as a teacher proceeds. The teacher explains and explains, until the idea is grasped, and if the child is very stupid so much more patience is necessary and given. But how frequently we hear men swearing at a horse or lashing him, because he does not do what he does not understand. A man that will whip a horse under such circumstances is foolish enough to swear at a tree because it does not fall when he tells it to. If we can not be gentle and patient we have no business to touch a colt, whatever else we may think ourselves competent to train. A writer upon the horse has truly said that a trainer needs but three requsites-firmness, steadiness and patience.-Western Rural.

WITH THE BEST INTENTIONS.

There's no doubt about it that Robinson was a good fellow at heart, and meant well; but it's astonishing what an amount of trouble a man may bring up-on himself by undertaking too much for his fellow-creatures. I don't suppose there was another man in our store that took the interest Robinson did in the different wardrobes of his fellow-clerks. different wardrobes of his fellow-clerks.

If a man got a new hat, Robinson noticed it right away; wanted to know where it was bought, and why, and generally concluded by saying that if the purchaser had consulted him, he might have made a better bargain. And I've no doubt he would. Robinson would have made it a point to favor him with have made it a point to favor him with his influence and experience, both of which were considerable. The same way with coats, or pants, or boots, or anything! But, notwithstanding all this, very few of our boys consulted Robinson in these matters; they generally bought their articles with a reckless indiscrimination that was painful to a man constituted as Robinson was. It seemed hard, when a man took the interest in his fellow-creatures that Robinson did. that his motives should be misconstrued and unappreciated. I remember when I bought that new Ulster of mine, I disliked, for some reason or other, to see Robinson. I had a ridiculous aversion to telling him just where I got it, and when, and how much it cost, and what I did with the other one. It was a kindly sympathy on Robinson's part, there's no doubt about that; but it was wasted, as far as our boys were concerned.
"Why don't the fellow mind his own business?" they said. "What does he want to manage other people's concerns

So I was glad when he told me, confidentially, that he was about to be married. I felt then that his interest would be so absorbed in the one object that it would be impossible to diffuse it all over the universe.

Robinson seemed to have found a treasure. Of course everybody thinks so; but I knew that Robinson would know more, and see more, and be less likely to be deceived than other men, and he had, as I supposed, gained the confidence of the family into which he proposed to marry. I was afraid his projected mother-in-law might object to some of Robinson's ways, but he told me he got on with her splendidly. I thought she was a remarkable woman, not altogether because she got on so well with gether because she got on so well with Robinson, but from Robinson's con-versation I imagined she must be very

"The fact is," said Robinson, "we are mutually interested in the same topics. We sit and talk about domestic matters for hours together, while Annie thrums over her new piece on the piano; again, if there's one thing more than another she admires in my character, it's the interest I take in little domestic details that most men despise or hold in utter indifference. You see, Smith, marriage is a sacred obligation."
"Undoubtedly, Robinson."

"And requires study, Smith. I wouldn't have been a successful buyer if I hadn't inquired into all the little intricacies of our line of business." "You certainly can judge of a good article, Robinson."

"Ah, Smith, the one I've secured now is beyond price. She's just the kind of goods a man wants to rest his eyes up-on when he's tired of shams and shoddies. Annie isn't brought up to dazzle and deceive. Her mother has taken great pains to inculcate in her daughter qualifications of mind and character that will make her a good wife and mother. Mrs. Page is an excellent woman, Smith."

"And I suppose her daughter is like

"Well, no, Smith. She can't converse and reason as her mother can, nor has she her mother's appreciative qualities. Annie's mind is less astute.

"Well, she's young yet."
"She's as simple and pliable as a little child. I'm a happy man, Smith."

I was delighted to hear him say so, plump and round as a little partridge, vivid. looking woman, with a deep voice, and something very firm about the contour of her jaw. Mrs. Page had more of what they call character in her face than her daughter would ever have; but I haven't the admiration for a face with character that some men have. Robin. character that some men have. Robin-son always said that he liked that kind of a thing, and he certainly had it in his Smith mother-in-law. Robinson spent the bet-ter part of an hour talking with her that night, while I was chatting with his wife. I came away convinced that marriage must be a very pleasant thing, with are like brothers a little wife like Robinson's, and my friendly fervor. bachelor quarters looked exceedingly dingy and forlorn.

I don't know how it was, but I took him afterward; but I want to surprise an extraordinary interest in Robinson's him. I wouldn't care to give him any on the matrimonial horizon before six thing if it wasn't a suprise."

"We've gone to housekeeping, you know," said Robinson. "I was afraid Annie would want to board at home with her mother, but Mrs. Page agreed with me it was better to build a little nest of our own. She took the kindest interest in everything, and wanted to go house-hunting with Annie, and to help her pick out the furniture. But I had already secured a house, and bought the furniture from friends of mine in the trifle as this." and I thrust the two fives furniture from friends of mine in the trifle as this," and I thrust the two fivebusiness, who would favor me in prices.
As to bed-linen, carpets, and things of that sort, I got them here in the store at White now to her lips, and an awful excost. In Heaven's name. any reason why a man shouldn't hire his own house and purchase his own furni-

"None whatever," I replied, "unless it may be that his wife desires the same

"But she didn't, Smith; Annie sald she was glad to leave it to me. I took the dear little woman in my arms and kissed her, and felt my heart lightened of a heavy load that somehow had rested there since my last interview with her mother. But Mrs. Page's manner is yet very unpleasant, Smith—very. I don't want to say that she accuses me of robbing Annie of any legitimate happiness, but she conveys some such impression to my mind, and it makes me feel like a malefactor. I'm so fond of my wife that the thought of depriving her of the smallest joy is misery to me."
"Well, these little trifles will all come right, Robinson. It isn't as if your mother-in-law lived with you."

"She's only round the corner, Smith.

I thought of that when I took the house, that it would be so comfortable for Annie to live near her old home, and have the attention and advice of her mother. As Heaven is my judge, Smith, I have tried to take every burden from my wife. I've opened accounts with the neighboring grocer, butcher, baker, and hired an excellent servant. I leave and hired an excellent servant. I leave own again.

door, and showed me into the parior ne had furnished. His wife came right down to me, and the moment she entered the parior I saw that her good sense and kind heart had gained their own again.

"My mother-in-law was right, Smith," he cried. "I have been a sneak and a special specia and hired an excellent servant. I leave a generous margin for sundries, which I look into rigidly at the first of every month, and settle with the other accounts, when we begin again with a clear, fresh record. A woman certainly ought to be happy when she has nothing to do but enjoy herself. I've even persuaded her to put all her little expenses down in my book so that she knows it. If I had only told you at once, indown in my book, so that she knows where every penny of her money goes; and, as I said before, I take care of the way! But I've given up that idea, be-was glad to get away. Robinson evidently had the best intentions in the me. You know I'm to have a new black dently had the best intentions in the world. He loved his wife. He even esteemed his mother-in-law. I never saw a man work so hard in what he considered his line of duty, and so utterly fail to recommend it to others, as poor Robinson. But he began to be brighter and apparently happier. The anniversary of his wedding was close at hand, and he was interested in a gift to his wife.

"I was puzzled what to get," said to know I'm to have a new black silk, and it costs a good deal of money to have it made. Mrs. Jones, my dress-maker, wouldn't do it for less than twenty dollars, and mamma and I will make it ourselves, and take the money we'd have to give Mrs. Jones for the present. That will be really my own money, because I shall earn it—my very own. Isn't it a capital idea?"

"Splendid!" I said; and shortly after I took my leave, thinking all the way

"I was puzzled what to get," said Robinson. "You see she's got almost everything, Smith; her wedding presents embraced so many little adornments and knickknacks. At last I hit upon a dear little wife of his.

We settled upon a dressing-case for Robinson before I left that day, and Mrs. Robinson and I had to go together to look at the different varieties of these articles, and I didn't want her to choose anything in a hurry, and then be sorry afterward; and altogether it was astonishing how absorbed I became in the purchase of that dressing-case. I thought her, won't you?"

"With pleasure," I said. And it so happened that she did come while Robinson was away, and seemed to bring all the sunshine with her.

I told her that her husband had left her in my care, and begged her to use me in any way that suggested itself to her; that it would be my happiness to serve her.

I suppose there was an honest fervor about this declaration that impressed Mrs. Robinson. It had so happened that I was able to show her some little favors and attentions in return for the many that her husband had done for me. I had told her I was under obliga-tions to Robinson. Of course I didn't explain that it was in his desiring to help me select my hats and coats and boots, t wasn't necessary to enter into these little details, but she understood that a natural gratitude on my part led me to send her in return a few little trifles, like bouquets, or new books, or music, or opera tickets, once in a while. So she knew the declaration of mine that day at the store, that I would be happy to serve her, came straight from my

"You are so good and kind," she said. Then all at once an eager wistfulness leaped into her eyes. "I wish I could dare ask you to do me a favor, Mr. Smith-a very great favor," she

"Do," I replied. "I won't abuse your generosity." "Oh! I wonder if it will be right?" she said, clasping her little gloved hands, and looking up in my face with a charming air of indecision. "I wonder if I ought to do such a thing?" "The fact that you desire to do it is a proof that it is blameless," I replied.

"I do desire it, ever so much," she said, "and it is perfectly blameless. I've set my heart on giving my husband a present upon our marriage anniversary."
"Is that all, Mrs. Robinson?" "All!" she replied tapping her foot with her parasol, with an air of vexation. She was looking upon the floor now, and a warm color burned in her cheek. "It is so hard to explain to and told him so, and at the wedding I you," she said. "I don't like to borrow expressed it as my origin that his hap-piness would last. I was charmed with understand my husband, and makes so his wife. She seemed such a nice, jolly many unpleasant remarks, and it's quite - ittle creature, so unaffected and simple in her manner, and had a wonderful magnetism about her. She was as she hesitated, and her color grew more with big black melting eyes and a pretty little mouth. I can't say I was so much drawn to her mother. She was a fine-wanted to ask me to lend her the money.

" You understand my husband, Mr. Smith. You know how kind and good he is to me. He has told me how he confides in you. You must know he is the dearest, best of husbands."

"Of course I do, Mrs. Robinson. We are like brothers," I said, with intense

"I hate even to deceive him for a mo ment, Mr. Smith. Of course I shall tell

"Of course you wouldn't, Mrs. Robinson. Any other way would be so humdrum and commonplace. I know just how you feel about it."

"And my husband is so thoughtful,

"Good-morning, sir," she said. "I have been mistaken in you. Please tell my husband I could not wait for him." She was a little woman, but she seemed about ten feet high as she swept out of our department. Fortunately some foreign cases had effectually screened us from observation. It was some time before I could pick up the bills. I felt stunned, bewildered, and exceedingly humiliated and missrable. exceedingly humiliated and miserable.

I had made an ass of myself in some way, and innocently outraged the feelings of this excellent little woman whom I was most desirous to serve.

When Robinson came back he thought it so strange that his wife hadn't waited for him. He wanted to know when she came, how long she staid; whether she sat down or stood up, or said she'd come in again, and if so, when. At last I was desperate, and went out into the street. Before I knew what I was about I was up town, and ringing the bell of the brown-stone house that Robinson hired. The servant he had selected came to the where every penny of her money goes; and, as I said before, I take care of the household expenses myself. The servant comes to me every morning for orders before I go to business, so that Annie scarcely knows what she's going to have for dinner. Could a man do more for his wife than that, Smith?"

"Perhaps he might better do less, Robinson. I'm only a miserable bachelor myself, and know nothing about women; but the question is, if you're not taking too much upon yourself."

"A man can't do too much, Smith, for the woman he adores."

Just then a customer came in, and I was glad to get away. Robinson evidently had the best intentions in the thousehold expenses myself. The servant ease he'd be sure to know if I parted with anything, he's so interested; he'd know if I parted with anyth

I took my leave, thinking all the way down to the store what an amount of trouble Robinson innocently gave that dear little wife of his.

The anniversary of Robinson's wedand the next morning I was walking in the Park, thinking it all over—how happy Robinson must have been when she surprised him with the dressing-case, and what a confoundedly lucky fellow he was, anyway. I fell into quite a sentimental mood. I suppose the scene around me had something to do with it. It was one of those delightful mornings in May, when happy ripples run through the grass, and the young shrubs burst suddenly into bloom and verdure. Birds sang gayly in the hedges, and the air was full of a vague perfume. Some white-winged butterflies flitted by. I took off my hat. Though a little bald, I enjoyed the radiance of the sunshine. I began to understand how at certain seasons a man might slip into rhyme, or

All at once this celestial silence was broken by an advancing figure. It was Robinson—and alone. His head was bowed, his hat jammed over his eyes; the only part of his face that was at first visible was of an ashen hue. His whole aspect was one of unutterable misery

"Good heavens! Robinson," I cried, rushing up to him and seizing his arm, "has anything happened to your wife?"
"To my wife? Yes," he said; and I sank into one of the iron benches. I thought she was dead, and was reneved to hear the next sentence. Relieved, though startled.

"My wife has left me, Smith. She's gone home to her mother." "Left you? Gone home to her mother? Why, wasn't last night your anni-

"Yes; that was how it came about; that was the way I found her out, Smith. She's deceived me—shamefully and persistently deceived me, and yet, miserable wretch that I am," added Robinson, sinking into the seat beside me and covering his face with his hands, "I

"You have deceived yourself in some way," I cried, naturally indignant and incredulous. "It is some miscrable mistake of your own. I know that your wife is the soul of integrity and

"God bless you, Smith!" he cried, rasping my hand fervently. "Would to Heaven I could believe what you say! but the facts are too convincing. Up to yesterday I was the happiest man in the universe. I went home early, and on my way stopped at Mrs. Jones's, my wife's dressmaker, to see if her black silk was done."
"What?" I shricked.

"Her black silk, you know," said Robinson—"the one I told you about. She said at least a dozen times that it was it to cost twenty dollars? Yes; but why was I so troubled about it?

have deceived me; I have just stopped at your dressmaker's. She hasn't seen "My wife turned pale, called to her mamma, and fell back into Mrs. Page's arms in a dead faint.

"Mrs. Page then flew into a violent rage, and abused me shamefully. She used language, Smith, that it is painful to repeat. She called me a sneak and a petty tyrant, a spy and a miser. She declared that her daughter never had a penny that I didn't know when it was coined, and how she spent it; that Annie had no more to do with her own house than a Dutch doll, and the sooner she was out of it the better. She sent my servant for a cab, and before my wife had fully recovered, she took her away. I have paced the floor all night, Smith. I shall never go back to the store again.

I'm a ruined man—for there's something behind all this, Smith; my servant thing behind all this, Smith; my servant told me last night that my wife has been in the habit lately of seeing a gentleman, of going out with him, and remaining a couple of hours; he is stout and dark, a little bald, and wears spectacles."

I burst out laughing. "That's me!"
I cried. "Look at me, Robinson. I'm him all about his dressing-case. Before I was half through, he had absolutely better to let women manage their own

"It's better to mind one's own business," said Robinson. "I've been a miserable meddler, and deserve to be punished. Before Heaven, Smith, it was with the best intentions."

"I know it, Robinson." "But I'll never do it again-never!

She said at least a dozen times that it was in the dressmaker's hands. I gave her twenty dollars long ago to pay for it, and I thought I'd step in on my way home, so that there would be no disappointment. That was perfectly natural, wasn't it, Smith?"

"Go on," I groaned.

"I went to the dressmaker's, rang the bell; Mrs. Jopes came to the door, and she said that she hadn't seen my wife for six months, that she never heard anything about a black silk dress. I was stunned, bewildered. I tried to persuade her she was wrong; she shut the door in my face. I hurried home naturally vexed and indignant. My wife came to meet me, smiling and fond, Smith—it breaks my heart to think of it. I asked her about the black silk. Was it done? Not quite, she said. Was it at the dressmaker's? Yes. How to Repel Parasites.

The thousands of different species of parasites which infest organic matter of their crops and feeding and care of may be included in two grand divisions, animal and vegetable. The first may again be subdivided into what are termed insects and worms (entozoa). Among the former the most familiar are the several species of bot flies and gad flies, which infest horses, sheep, and various domestic and wild animals, passing only a portion of their lives within their victims; while other insect parasites, like the ticks, lice, and mites, feed upon the skin or suck the blood of the animals which they infest. The entozoa or in- ual plant or animal on this earth.—N. ternal parasitic worms sometimes live Y. Sun. entirely in the intestines, as in the case of the tape worm and hair worm; others penetrate to every part of the flesh and muscles, as in the case of the trichina; while others infest only particular organs, like the gape worm in the wind-pipe of chickens, and liver fluke in the liver of sheep. Of the parasites belong-ing to the vegetable kingdom the most plants and animals are those known as microscopic fungi, and there is not a plant or animal on this earth which is not, under certain conditions, liable to the attacks of these minute pests. Even troublesome and destructive to cultivated the hair on our horses and cattle is often infested with a vegetable growth which destroys its elasticity and renders it as brittle as glass. The grains in our fields are attacked by rust, smut, and mildew, as are also many kinds of fruits, these being the vulgar names of the various kinds of microscopic fungi which grow, bloom, and ripen their spores, as those minute organs are called which perform the functions of seed. There are also giant species of parasitic plants, like the mis-tletoes, which sometimes destroy the largest trees of our forests; but they are not sufficiently common to do much harm, or of any special interest to the agriculturist, the minute species being the most formidable, and causing the most severe losses to both the farmer and fruit-grower. To write the natural history of the most common species of parasites infesting cultivated plants and domesticated animals would require volumes; consequently we can only briefly touch upon the general principles which govern their multiplication and the best methods of repelling their attacks. It would appear from a general view of the habits THE GAZETTE. of the minute parasites, whether of the animal or fungoid tribes, that their special mission is to hasten the destruction of the feeble among their natural victims and avoid the strong and vigorous. For instance, if a farmer neglects his horse, giving him only poor, innu-tritious food, and compelling him to sleep in a filthy yard or stable, with all surroundings of a nature to cause gen-eral deblity, millions of parasitic enemies, hovering about, pounce upon the unfortunate brute, adding to his miseries and hastening his destruction. If his feet and legs are constantly covered with filth, fungoid diseases, known as grease, foot rot, or thrush, appear on them, eating into and destroying both horn and flesh. If grooming is neglected in summer, the eggs of the bot fly re-main on the hairs of his legs and breast until licked off by his tongue and carried into the stomach, where they soon worms or larvæ. If kept in filthy stables mange mite burrows in his skin, the hair comes off, and deep and trouble-some sores are produced. With clean stables and good grooming such parasites would be destroyed; and even if the animal could have unrestrained liberty in the open air, he would probably be able to resist these attacks, provided the climate was not too severe. Intestinal worms invariably appear when the animal is kept upon poor food, because he is unable for want of strength to resist their attacks, and the poor old neglected horse is the natural and principal prey of both internal and external parasites. Among cattle the same principles hold good. Wet pastures, filthy, muddy yards, exposure to severe storms, with insufficiency of good nutritious food, destroy the natural protection to the feet; foot-rot sets in, and general debility is an invitation to all the hordes of parasitic enemies ever present awaiting a victim. It is not medicines that the stock owner should seek, but preventives, and these are always to be found in proper care and food. Horn-ail and wolf-in-the-tail are imaginary diseases that have their origin in exposure to cold storms and an empty stomach. Intestinal worms never bother the sleek, well-fed horse or ox, because they are abundantly able to resist the attacks of such insignificant natural enemies. Mange in horses, cattle, sheep, dogs, and other animals, means filth and unfavorable surroundings, and while it may spread from the unhealthy to the healthy and well-cared for, it is always readily cured among the latter. If we pass from animals to plants, we find that the resistant theory still holds good, and that the apple-tree that is carefully and liberally fed is always able to resist the attacks of the various species of bark-lice and similar parasitic enemies. Of course we must make exceptions with respect to trees planted in such cases weakness and general debility follow from other causes than lack of sustenance and care, and there may be instances where over-stimulation will produce unhealthiness in both plants and animals; but these are compartively rare. An animal may become too fat by generous feeding, with little or no exercise, but parasites seldom infest the overfed, while they are certain to attack the poor and feeble Mildew on plants is usually attributed to unfavorable seasons, which is no doubt true; but it is the extremes in temperature or some hygrometric condition that weaken the vitality of the plant and make the conditions favorable to the attacks of the microscopic fungus recognized as mildew. Our grasses are frequently attacked by mildew during the summer, after several days of cloudy weather, which prevents the leaves from performing their proper functions; but several cold dry days may produce the same results; and this leads us to believe that any extreme which weakens vitality is favorable to mildew. The finding of bacteria in the branches of peach-trees, or of a particular species of fungus on the curled leaves in spring, is no indication that these parasites are the cause of disease, but merely the result of it.

The mistake which a majority of our farmers and fruit-growers make in treating the plants and animals under their care is in seeking remedies for curing diseases instead of the means of preventing them. The idea that plants and animals may be so cared for as to resist disease seems never to have been thought of by a large proportion of our people; hence the great demand for medicines and the services of the doctor. If our theory is the correct one, and we believe it will stand the test of experience, generous feeding, abundant exercise and a full development are the best of all remdies for parasitic diseases of all kinds, whether in the animal or vegetable kingdom. We call the attention of farmers to this, with the hope that they will put it to the test, not only in the cultivation their animals, but also apply it to their own persons and those of the members of their families. To make a fire we must have fuel, and the better the fuel the stronger and more fierce the heat. The same is true with plants and animals; food is necessary to produce growth and insure strength, and when this is supplied in proper quantities and quality, it gives the power to resist the attacks of parasitic enemies, as well as to fulfill the true mission of the individ-

AND SPERMATORRHEA.

A valuable Discovery and New Departure in Medical Science, an entirely New and positively effective Remedy for the speedy and permanent Cure of Seminal Emissions and Impotency by the only true way, viz: Direct Applications the principal Seat of the Disease, acting by Absorption, and exerting its specific influence on the Seminal Vesicles, Ejaculatory Ducts, Prostate Gland, and Urethra. The use of the Remedy is attended with no pain or inconvenience, and does not interfere with the ordinary pursuits of life; it is quickly dissolved and soon absorbed producing an immediate soothing and restorative effect upon the sexual and nervous organizations wrecked from self-abuse and excesses, stopping the drain from the system, restoring the Dinness of Sight, Nervous Debility, Confusion of Ideas, Aversion to Society, etc., etc., and the appearance of premature old age usually accompanying this trouble, and restoring perfect Sexual Vigor, where it has been dormant for years. This mode of treatment has stood the test in very severe cases, and is now a pronounced success. Drugs are too much prescribed in these troubles, and, as many can bear witness to, with but little if any permanent good. There is no Nonsense about this Proparation. Practical observation enables us to positively guarantee that it will give satisfaction. During the eight years that it has been in general use, we have thousands of testimonials as to its value, and it is now conceded by the Medical Profession to be the most rational means yet discovered of reaching and curing this yery prevalent trouble, that is well known to be the cause of untold misery to so many, and upon whom quacks prey with their useless nostrums and big fees. The Remedy is put upla neat boxes, of three sizes. No. 1, (enough to last a month.) $3: No. 2, (sufficient to effect a permanent cure, unless in severe cases,) $5: No. 3, (lasting over three months, will stop emissions and restore vigor in the worst cases.) $7. BRIEFLETS.

-Last of June.

-The night of prayer at the churches. -The Guards meet for drill again to -The driveway into Fredericks' livery stable is being improved.

-The 2d and 3d ward boys were at the bat this morning, and the score stood 21 -W. T. Vankirk is having a Fourth of July front put on his store. It's being painted a bloody red. -A Madison infantile astronomer ha discovered that the comet is only a red headed angel combing out its hair. -The new reservoir in the Third ward east of the court house was completed to-day. It required 105 barrels of water -Those who intend to take part in the Mardi Gras feature of the Fourth's procession should report their names to the

-The case of Hoganson, of Orfordville charged with giving away liquor to avoid the license law, was dismissed by Justice Wickham to-day.

-A good place to spend a few days pleasantly and profitably will be at the State Sunday school assembly at Madison, August 2d to 12th.

-Business has got so red hot in the Municipal court that the big stove which has been one of the few ornaments in the room, has been removed. -Hot weather causes a rush for the

Saratoga and Waukesha water, and the other cool drinks served from Heim street's beautiful fountain. -A tramp printer improved his noon time by doing a little pilfering in the nabbed and lodged behind the bars. -Forty persons have thus far notified the committee that they are preparing to take part in the Mardi Gras display on the Fourth, and it is hoped many others will report soon. -The new firm of Green & Rice seem to be having quite a rush on the carpet weepers, of which they have several kinds, meluding the Aurora, which is said to be "the boss." -A Chicago professor asserts that most folk can get a better sight of the comet through an opera glass than through a telescope. The reason probably is that most folk haven't any telescope. -A new barn just raised by H. H McGorden, in the town of Plymouth, was razed by the wind storm night beore last. The wind twisted it all out of shape, runing it completely, and rendering many timbers unfit for use in rebuild--Richard O'Donnell is mowing the grass about the Court House. By mowing the whole of the ground the place will be greatly improved, and made more attractive and convenient for the hundreds of people who will gather here on the Fourth. -The job presses in the Gazette office have averaged 5,845 impressions daily during this month, closing to-day. That plainly indicates that people appreciate good work and reasonable prices. The average since January 1, has been 100,-

000 per month. -J. C. Jenkins and family desire through the columns of the Gazette to thank the friends who in so many ways showed their kindliness and sympathy during their affliction, and to those who assisted in the last sad rites by which the form of the wife and mother was laid

-The matinee and evening entertainment to be given at the Opera house on the Fourth by Harry Webber, promise to be a heartily enjoyable feature of the day. "Nip and Tuck" is full of fun and the company presenting it have won much praise elsewhere, and will doubtless win much here. By the way tickets are selling at Prentice & Evenson's there will be a good-sized house to greet them

-Who is he? He was found lying given to extending congratulations and dead in a field near Rockford by two well wishes, the guests were served with boys. In his pockets were found two a sumptous repast, and soon after the pocket-books, both empty; on one was farewells were said, Mr. and Mrs. Butterthe name of "Ira Edwards, Esq., Panama field taking their departure on a trip to Oct. 25, 1879." Also cards with the names | St. Paul. They expect to return here in Wis; J. R. Rood, M. D., Darien, Wis.: also a copy of a Janesville paper dated June 24. The man did not seem to be a Butterfield being there engaged as tramp; was about 65 years of age, fleshy, book-keeper for a large manufacturing and there was only one tooth in his head, that one being on the upper jaw in front. -Dr. Stephen Bowers, of the Clinton Herald, was in the city to-day.

-The celebrated soprano, Mile. Litta, and a portion of her company, were in city to-day. -Miss Georgia Coon has returned from the east accompanied by Mr. and Mrs.

Linsley, her sister, from Binghamton, N. -Rev. T. W. Goodspeed, brother of the ate Rev. Dr. Goodspeed, was yesterday made a Doctor of Divinity, by the Chi cago university. -Miss Sarah Richardson, daughter of Hon. Hamilton Richardson, has returned from Montreal, where she has been attending school. Unto Phillip C. Baker a son is born. Weight eleven pounds, and you couldn't buy it at $1,000 an ounce. Baker feels rich, and ought. his many old friends here as "Archie," is one of the officers in command of the Highlanders, and will come here with them on the Fourth.

-S. Henry Hudson and his two sisters start to-day for Milwankee, where they will remain until after the Fourth, and then proceed by boat to Duluth, and then visit for a time in Minnesota, Mr. Hud son remaining there, and the sisters going on to Dakota.

-Harry Bradford of Milwaukeee the wideawake northwestern passenger agent of the Detroit, Grand Haven & Milwau kee railway, was in the city to-day. It is this line which has that elegant new mittee. steamer "City of Milwankee," which is calling forth so much praise on account of its beauties and comforts It is have evidently appreciate it.

-Rev. L. N. Wheeler, who is soon to sail for China to resume his missionary work there, has been succeeded in the presiding eldership of the Fond du Lac district by Rev. G. H. Moulton. Mr. Wheeler has written a book which is to be published about the first of August by S. C. Griggs & Co., of Chicago. It is entitled "The Foreigner in China," and consists of an historical sketch of the foreign ideas that have penetrated the Chinese empire from the earliest time down to the present. Professor Sawyer, of Lawrence university, has written for it an able introduction. The volume is to be about 300 pages and is to be sold at $1.20, and the proceeds are to be devoted to the education of Mr. Wheeler's

BELOIT COLLEGE.

The closing exercises of Beloit college were held yesterday morning, in the First Congregational Church. The number in the graduating clas was ten. The orations were all well delivered. The music for the exercises was furnished by the Elgin military band. After the graduating exercises were closed, upon announcement by President Chapin, large number of the audience adjourned to the campus where the sum of ten thousand dollars was presented to the college for the purpose of building an observatory, and thereupon President Chapin dedicated a space of ground, upon which the observatory is to be constructed, to the cause of science and to the study of the heavens. After these exercises the alumni and friends of the college proceeded to the gymnasium, and partook of dinner at the expense of the alumni. In the evening the citizens and visit were entertained by troupe, concert the music was so good that the pronight, the band in company with many MERBILY MATED. This forenoon there was a happy gath ering at the home of Mrs. S. Rolston, in this city, the occasion being the marriage of her daughter, Miss Fannie Rolston, to Mr. Charles L. Butterfield, of Horicon. The parlors and rooms were elaborately decorated with evergreens and cut flowers, and there were several unique and suggestive designs, among them being a bow and arrow, and a large arch with a floral horseshoe pendant, beneath which the contracting parties took their position, Miss Ida Clapp, of Fort Atkinson, playing the wedding march as they entered the room. Mr. Charles Goss, of Winona, served as groomsman, andiMiss Minuie Miniere, of Harvard, as bridesmaid. Rev. Mr. Brown, of the Presbyterian church, per formed the ceremony, preceding it by prayer, and a few remarks concerning the married state. After time had been of David Holmes, Shopiere, Rock county the course of two weeks, and will soon thereafter repair to Horicon, where they will make their home, Mr. concern. The best wishes of many friends here will follow them in their journey through life, and they will be reminded of the important occasion to-

of a Team for the City's Use. A regular meeting of the City Council was held last evening at which Mayor Lovejoy presided and all the members except Ald. Hemming, were present.

After the reading and approval of the minutes, the application, bond and receipt of David Myers, for a saloon license, were presented and referred; also like documents from Jacob Heller.

The report of the street commissioner recommending the building of certain sidewalks was received and placed on

A remonstrance, signed by eighteen property owners on Glen street, was presented, protesting against the proposed vacating of any portion of that street. -A. B. McLain, better known among The prayer of the petitioners, on motion of Ald. Cox, was granted.

> A large batch of bills and accounts were presented, among them being one of John Hennessey "for damage done by overflow of water on his lot in the Second ward, between the Catholic and Methodist churches, for three years past, by drowning chickens as follows: In 1878, 101 chickens at—" Ald. Fitzgibbon objected to the further reading of the bill, as it stated that it was between the Methodist and Catholic churches, and the council could not settle matters between any of the churches. After some talk it was referred to the judiciary com-

On motion of Ald. Nowlan, licenses were granted to Myers and Heller.

In accordance with the report of the ing a rush of business, and the public finance committee a number of bills were ordered paid, and a batch of bills for labor pushed through under suspension of the rules that the men might get their money for the Fourth.

The committee on investigating the Hickory street matter were granted more

Ald. Murdock introduced an order for sidewalk building. Adopted.

Ald. Robinson presented a resolution for the opening of Park avenue in the Fourth ward to intersect with High street, and moved its adoption. Ayes-Conrad, Cox, Hawes, Norris, Potter, Robinson-6. Noes-Fitzgibbon, Murdock, Nowlan-3.

The city clerk was instructed to notify property owners interested.

Judge Patten by consent of the countwo daughters, who are to remain in this cil expressed the dissatisfaction of Mr. Collins, one of these property owners. He thought his damage was fully $450, instead of $275, the amount fixed by the appraiser, Mr. Bemis.

Ald. Potter moved that the fire department committee prepare specifications and get estimates as to the cost of building a fire cistern in each ward. Carried.

Ald. Rebinson reported that the judiciary committee had purchased a team. harness, wagon, blankets, etc., of A. A. Dresser for $400, and presented Mr. Dresser's bill for the same. He moved that an order be drawn for the amount, from the general fund. Ald. Nowlan thought it should be from the fire department fund. Ald. Fitzgibbon thought this queer, and fire flew. Ald. Nowlan spoke again, and thought the purchase of the team was not legal, as it was done by only one member of the committee having it in charge, without calling the committee together, or having them vote on the matter. Ald. Fitzgibbon called him to order, and Ald. Nowlan called Fitz gibbon to order. The latter moved the previous question. It was carried. Ald. Robinson insisted on being heard, as aspersions had been cast upon his character. The Mayor ruled him down. Ald. Norris got in a part of a little speech, but was called to order. The question was then put and not receiving a majority of the aldermen elect was lost, the vote standing: Ayes-Fitzgibbon, Hawes, Murdock, Potter, Robinson.-5.

Noes-Conrad, Cox, Norris, Nowlan, -4. Ald. Fitzgibbon sung out that he would like to have sombody bring on some more boys play. Ald. Norris called him to order, Fitzgibbon insisted that the latter should rise in his seat on calling a member to order, and two or three moved to adjourn. Fitzgibbon shouted to wait a minute, and this gave the Mayor a chance to state that he had received an invitation for himself and the council to join in the Fourth of July

This was accepted, and a ljournment was then taken.

Used to say: "Boys, if your blood is out of order try Burdock tea;" and then they had to dig the Burdock and boil it down in kettles, making a nasty smelling de-coction; now you get all the curative properties put up in a palatable form in BURDOCK BLOOD BITTERS. Price $1, trial size, 10 cents.
